Are you Feeling Grateful?

Gratitude is a natural feeling for people who haven't hardened their conscience. And being Christians we are certainly not among those with hard hearts!

Yet, even for Christians who practice the spiritual discipline of praise, prayer and thanksgiving, on some days it's easier to be grateful than others.

Well, I hope that this is one of those days for you! It is for me!

Of course, you might ask what I'm so grateful for? After all, the list is almost endless when we get down to thinking about it. But specifically I'm grateful to be able to work with you.

Yes—I'm more than a little bit grateful to be working with you in this great Church of Christ India Fund!

Here's what triggered my gratitude: Last month I asked in the newsletter for you to consider helping with an extra donation so that we can lift some of the burdens from our faithful evangelists and their families.

You have responded magnificently!

You've responded so well that we don't need any more funds to be able to provide the specific relief that we asked you about!

I know it's more than unusual for any mission work to say that we don't need any more contributions for this project or that program. But there it is!

You've fully, fully fulfilled our request for this preachers relief!

And no wonder I'm grateful!

I'm grateful to be a part of this meaningful and life-changing mission. I'm grateful to be working with people like you who are like minded!

- Like minded—preaching the pure unadulterated gospel to the millions who are eager to hear.
- Like minded—supporting the suffering saints, widows and orphans as they carry out the work of the Lord's church.
- Like minded—grounding churches and their leaders in the face of terrors that attack the Lord's people on every side.
- Like minded—sacrifice in an ongoing basis to keep this work in place.
- Like minded—being willing to occasionally step up and sacrifice additionally for specific and special needs.

Now I know that we all can be, and we all ought to be grateful for the myriad of blessing we enjoy at His hand. Yet, I can't but help reflect that some blessings are so important, so meaningful and so life-sustaining that they stand out.

Thank you for being part of this great work. I'm sure that I'm not imagining things when I imagine that you're as grateful for these things as I am.

Of course, we still have ongoing needs as you well know. So please continue to keep us in your prayers, and continue to send us your contributions.

Also, my daughter Rachel Dickey will be getting in touch with our supporting congregations to schedule my report to you. So as soon as you can, please email her to let her know that you'd like to schedule my visit!

Rachel's email is rdIndiaMissions@gmail.com
